

Starving Kiddies of Europe Arouse Sympathy of Utahns

Telephones are being used all over the state in the effort to raise money for the relief of millions of starving children in central and eastern Europe. And in the mind's eye of the canvassers and those who listen to the plea, is a picture like this one—an actual photograph of one of the starving children of Poland.

Miss La Mar Tanner, an earnest Utah worker, is shown in the act of telephoning her friends the news that a contribution of $10 will save the life of this child.

Facing sure starvation unless America comes to the rescue, 3,500,000 little children of central and eastern Europe are crying for aid.

The call has come to Utah, and throughout the state, earnest workers are engaged in the humanitarian endeavor of raising funds to tide over the sufferers across the sea until the next harvest. Only $10 is required to keep together the bodies and souls of the children until their own impoverished countries can take over the work without American aid. Until that time, however, the generous people of this country are the only hope of fighting off the dread spectre.

INVISIBLE GUEST.

The work of raising funds in Utah to meet this state's quota has become intensive and the people of Ogden are being appealed to through many sources to entertain at their tables this year, at least one "invisible guest" the comforting unseen presence of a tiny tot of Europe being fed his one meal a day through the generosity of the wealthiest nation on earth.

Only two weeks remain in which to push the collection in Utah to a successful conclusion, and while many generous offerings have been received, there will have to be many more before the sum in Utah approximates the hopes of the leaders in the move.

Ships Cattle Here From Denver Market

"I can ship cattle to Ogden from Denver and make money despite the freight rates."

This was the statement this morning of Ben Johnson, Denver livestock dealer, who arrived Saturday with nine cars of cattle, which he disposed of on the local market.

There is from a cent to a cent and a half difference in favor of the Ogden market it is said.

So far as can be determined, the shipment of Johnston's cattle from Denver to Ogden marks the first time the local market has been given preference over the Denver market.

Local stockmen look upon the occurrence as a good omen and some predicted that further business will be diverted to Ogden from Denver in the future if the superiority of the present market can be maintained.

FAVORS CANYON PARK PROJECT

Former Ogden Man Urges Action on Playground Near Mouth of Gorge

Urging that Ogden take advantage offered in building a park and playground near the mouth of Ogden canyon and calling attention to the immense value the park with an automobile boulevard would gain for the city in advertising, J. L. Scudder, formerly of Ogden, has written from Seattle to Mayor Frank Francis appealing that efforts be made to make the proposed park a reality.

"I read an article in the newspaper relative to the acquisition of the property at the mouth of Ogden canyon for parks and playgrounds," Mr. Scudder wrote. "Naturally I felt keenly interested and I trust no obstacle will arise to delay the immediate purchase. The thought came to me that the usual opposition would be forthcoming, more especially as the country in general is trying to cut tail rather than add to the burden of the taxpayers. But if they will stop to consider the wonderful means of advertising this avenue affords, and what a delay of even five years will mean in the purchase price, I don't believe there are any property owners but what will countenance the necessary tax levy."

Great Falls, Mont., has had more worth while advertising through the medium of its park and boulevard system, for a city of its size, than any other place in the country. In Seattle I have heard more favorable comments passed to Great Falls than any other city in the country."
